Green Building Institute Brings Green Education to Washington, DC

Local residents to learn what it means to "go green"

Jessup, MD (April 5, 2009) – The Green Building Institute is launching a four-part series, "Go Green in DC", to help city residents, businesses and professionals learn how to "green" their homes and businesses, improve their bottom line and help the environment.

"The Institute is committed to help DC residents understand what it means to 'go green' and how each of us has an important role to play. It is a natural next step to bring our classes directly to DC to make it easier for everyone to have access to this information and then do their part," says David Woolley-Wilson, Executive Director.

The series will feature:

- April 22st Building the Green Economy
- April 29th Buying a Green Home
- May 6th Renewable Energy for Your Home and Business
- May 13th Catching the Rain

This four-part series will take place Wednesday nights at the Hamiltonian Gallery, located at 1353 U Street, NW.

To register for the "Go Green In Silver Spring" series, read detailed class descriptions, see a complete schedule of all Institute classes, or to become a member of the Institute go to:
