Green Building Institute Brings Green Education to Silver Spring

Local residents to learn what it means to “go green”

Jessup, MD (April 5, 2009) – The Green Building Institute is launching a four-part series, “Go Green in Silver Spring”, to help city residents, businesses and professionals learn how to “green” their homes and businesses, improve their bottom line and help the environment.

“The Institute is committed to help Silver Spring residents understand what it means to ‘go green’ and how each of us has an important role to play. It is a natural next step to bring our classes directly to Silver Spring to make it easier for everyone to have access to this information and then do their part,” says David Woolley-Wilson, Executive Director.

The series will feature:

- April 21st      Building the Green Economy
- April 28th      Buying a Green Home
- May 5th        Renewable Energy for Your Home and Business
- May 12th      Catching the Rain

This four-part series will take place Tuesday nights at Greenavise, located at 9321 Georgia Avenue in Silver Spring.
